An important change (says Kuhlow) has been brought about in the freights by the direct German steam communication with the Far East. In this relation an official communication from Canton is of special interest, bringing forth clearly the change which has taken place in the shipment of cassia leaves, gall nuts, fireworks, preserves, and walking sticks. Formerly these goods were shipped by sailing vessels, they now go by steamer; and the German mail steamers have, in particular, made the shipment lighter by modifications in the rates. The circumstance that the insurance is less on shipments by steamer, and especially by mail steamer, has assisted considerably in obtaining the preference for steamers. Moreover, the rapid passages mad by the German mail steamers have also without doubt largely contributed to the same end.

A New York telegram dated the 29th May Californian paper says:-The annual meeting f the Pacific Muil Steamship Company was held this morning. The old directors were reelected. The net earnings for the year were $494.896. The annual report says :- "In consequence of the strict enforcement of the Chinese Restriction Act the revenues on the China Line have follow greatly off. Transpacific business has been injuriously affected by the competition of the Canadian Pacific Company. Satisfactory arrangements have been made with the Canadian Pacific, by which useless outting of rates will be avoided. TETE-A-TETE. Philip passed a night of pain and fever. He was bruised and shaken. His hands had been scarificed in the slide down the rubble and when to move without torture. circulation returned in them they bled. The exposure to cold had affected him; and he nehed plates had been passed over it. He could not asked the voice of Miss Durham, almost in his woman. Then came back the reply that the could not and would not sing to such a detestable little instrument as that in the salls. Next day Philip was obliged to keep his bed. The ravine was completely blocked up and sheeted over with snow, and we did not know anything of the horrible chasm down which the river plunged and through which it struggled. We only knew that you had gone through a crust of snow, and that you had to be drawn out." "But did you not hear the thunder of the

"We did not particularly notice it—the roof of snow muffled it. You who were beneath heard it, but we-we may have heard something, but had no more idea of what there was beneath than you can have had when you slipped through." " It was very unfeeling of her to laugh." "Look here. Philip," said Salome. "In turning the sleeves of your coat inside out I have found these flowers, Edelweiss, and fresh." " Yes. I found them." He considered for a moment, and then said. "They are for you. Wear them, and let our party know that I did not encounter the risks passed through without bringing back with Salome." said he. "don't let Lambert, and above all Mrs. Sidebottom come and worry me to day. I am in horrible pain. I cannot move. and I cannot bear to be bothered. You go down and take a little stroll: do not mind about me. I will try to doze. I had no sleep last night. I am turning all the colours of the rainbow, I was so bruised. I shall be right in a day or two. No bones are broken, but I cannot stir, and cannot endure to be worried; let me be quiet and a good deal to mysolf. I will sleep when I can" "Ma. I sit by you a little?" she asked, timidly. "I will not speak-only hold your hand." She took his silence for consent. 'And he found comfort in her presence: a soothing feeling his, and spread over his heart.

He was somewhat ashamed of himself. had not made his expedition among the rocks, and met with his fall in searching for Edelweiss for her, but for Artemisia. Salome had accepted the flower and cherished it, as if he had sought it for her, and he allowed her to remain in this delusion. Was this honourable? Was it in accordance with that strict rectitude on which he plumed himself? Yet he could deeply, and—humble himself too considerably. Two days ago Artemisia Durham had taken his hand on the Oberslp, beside the lake, when he extended it to her in pledge that he would do great things for her; and now, in redemption of an hour or two I had spun you round like a his pledge, he had tried to get her a bit of Edel. teetotum. weiss, and had tumbled through the snow in his efforts. And what could be do for her? She had not asked for legal advice or for figured table linen, the two things he could furnish her with without offence. It was as well that his hand was burt, it served bim right: he had no right to offer what he was unable to perform. How differently he had felt as Artemisia held his hand! Then an intoxicating current had set boiling through his veins, turning his head, maddening him. Now the cool hand of Salome conveyed balm to his aching joints, and what was a better medicine, though a bitter one, self-reproach to his conscience. Now, also, for the first time since his walk with Miss Durham, some of his old suspicion coxed up through the joints of his thoughts. What was the reason of her laughter? Thrice it had occurred; first she had said something laughing. ly about him to Beaple Yee at table, and provoklaughed for no particular reason that Philip could see, and had made Philip laugh with her. And, hastly, she had laughed mockingly, alone, when he was rescued from the very verge of a dreadful death.

He shut his eyes and lay still. Salome sat by him for an hour, and then, thinking he was to take a short walk: it was tedious in the inn. with only a few old an lodd volumes of Tauchnitz novels about; and cold or inactivity was rendering the Labarte girls torpid, and they were clinging about aunt Janet, or dropping upon her. at embarrassing times. Mrs. Sidebottom did i not feel equal to managing all three unaided, and as Miss Durham declined to accompany her. she insisted on Salome lending her aid. Balome consented. Her husband had wished that she should go out, and he was asleep and could be left without anxiety. The girls had been shown at Andermatt beads and seals made of a sparkling stone—which was said to be found on the St Gotthard road, half way down the Val Tremels. and when Mrs. Sidebottom proposed a walk they entreated to be allowed to search for this precious stone, of which they resolved to compose necklaces for themselves, or at least bracelets. It would create quite a sensation at Elbout: not one of the girls there had seen this beautiful stone-not one probably had heard the name of Tremoline, by which it was called. There was another reason why Mrs. Sidebottom, on this occasion, particularly desired the companionship of Salomo. She was commissioned to break to her the news that Janet and Lambert were engaged, and to use her endeavours him, weighted with lead in his globular nother pice. They did not leave without an altercato overcome any prejudice Salome might enter- parts. It was a wonder that next day Signora Lowbardi did not find the sheets of No. 18 singed, so hot did Philip become between them with offend-

NOW ON SALE. IMPERIAL QUARTO. NANGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN

PRONUNCIATION. Au Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at Daily Press Office. Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivelled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years. been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy. and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attnined, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work the following facts are submitted for consideration :--Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16.0(8) Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which 1629 have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub-For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its TIES. Vel. 17. SCOTLAND; IEELAND, pages enables a person who understands English WALES, and European Possessions, Vol 27a to communicate effectively with natives who AMERICA, North, South, Central and understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. Nations, and the Independent Empires and To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

> It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages. 4 Vols. IMPERIAL QUARTO, Price, $20. A Large REDUCTION in PRICE is made to Purchasers of STX or more Copies.
